

Lack of student involvement dampens DSA elections

By M.L. Skorsky

Participation in the upcoming Doon Student Association elections in the 1991-92 school year has been disappointing, says Paula Price, an ASHA member, ASHA vice president, DSA president, and former representative of three student positions. "There's not a lot of student involvement," she says.

Students and Robert Davidson, ASHA's executive director, are working on ways to increase student involvement in the DSA.

Graphics student wins province-wide logo competition

By Dennis Hartman

A Cambridge College student won the Ontario-wide competition to design the logo for Ontario College of Art and Design.

Robert Price, a first-year student, designed the logo. He was one of 100 students who entered the competition.

The logo was chosen by a panel of judges. It will be used by the college for the next five years.

Price's design is a logo that is a combination of the letters 'O' and 'C'.

Student preparation for college courses inadequate

By Phil Mathison

When Jennifer Campbell 15 years ago what she thought of as the "world's most important," "life-changing" first day of college, Campbell's first day was a disappointing experience for her and her friends. Campbell, who is now a senior at the University of Washington, said that she and her friends were not prepared for the college courses they were taking.

Jennifer Campbell

From September to February of 1975-76, she was at the University of Washington. She was not prepared for the college courses she was taking. She was not prepared for the college courses she was taking.

"The number of students who are not prepared for college is a real problem," Campbell said. "It is an ongoing problem. It is a real problem."

English and computer studies are the most common of these. Campbell, who is now a senior at the University of Washington, said that she and her friends were not prepared for the college courses they were taking.

"I was not prepared for the college courses I was taking," Campbell said. "I was not prepared for the college courses I was taking."

Campbell said it would have been better for her to have had more preparation when looking for

"Maybe that says something about our education system," she said.

As a faculty member, I was an English professor. I was an English professor. I was an English professor. I was an English professor.

For many years, under the leadership of the English Department, we have been preparing students who are not prepared for college courses.

Students today face more preparation, Campbell said, but more economic, cultural and social needs are simply changing and students need to make adjustments, she observed. Campbell said that she and her friends were not prepared for the college courses they were taking.

Campbell observed, "It's not that it is more preparation when students today are not prepared for college courses."

Academic testing increases 68%

By Phil Mathison

Academic testing for Spokane College applicants increased 68.1 per cent over last year, said Dr. Clements, a Spokane University professor in the Department of Education.

In February 1991, 14 college applicants were accepted by the Department of Education. In February 1992, 24 applicants were accepted.

Clements said that the increase in academic testing is due to the fact that the Department of Education is now accepting more applicants. The Department of Education is now accepting more applicants.

More students using counselling services

By Pam Mackinnon

Many students are using Conestoga College counselling facilities this year says Gail Co. co-ordinator of Student Services at Conestoga.

"More students are taking interest in their academic studies," Pam Mackinnon said in a recent staff report.

Student services handled 569 counselling appointments between September and December 1991 at four campuses, including, counselling and test-preparation.

Between September and December of this year, staff will offer 200 more appointments for counselling — at a cost of $4 per hour.

Available counselling focuses on students' study habits, writing, oral problems and educational needs.

Unplanned counselling sessions on the personal problems students face such as financial, family and sexual decisions.

For information contact Gail Co. at Conestoga College, 1000 University Ave., Kitchener, Ont. N2G 1C1, ext. 2222.

The students have more people who have been helped because people would rather stay in their schools than look for other options.

"This year 60 per cent of students there are the real problems. Making it going to work on their own, when the income 50 per cent of the class the 1 hour the students go to jobs, however, the whole whole category needs help."

There are the people who only go to school, coming to the college for job opportunities and who are not as motivated as the previous, Mackinnon said.

For all the more students have difficulty coping with college life, Mackinnon said, as the students are not properly educated.

"I find many students were not challenged enough in high school and when they come to college, they have difficulty. They come to school more."

The next term September in September 31 students have been identified as students who are planned, Mackinnon said.

Although many students are not motivated, Mackinnon would like to see the students who are not motivated to be more motivated and to be more motivated to be more motivated.

"It's a double edged sword," Mackinnon said. "We have more people," but students will need personal appointments and that might be the best kind of support.
